The good news regarding Lap Band surgery is that costs for the procedure have been dropping in the last few years. Combined with more insurance companies covering the procedure, and you have a win-win situation for the patient.

Another way to look at it is that you have likely spent a ton of money on weight loss programs over the years and would continue to do likewise in the coming years without Lap Band surgery.

The cost for the procedure will include the facility, surgeon and the charge for anesthesia.

You will also need to determine if whether the chosen surgeon and hospital is an in-network provider, and whether your procedure is viewed as an in-patient (overnight stay) or out-patient (same day).
